Good Afternoon Adam and Alan,

We just wanted to reach out and share another update with you before the weekend.

Since we last spoke, both Kristen and I have completed our reviews of the financial report draft. Kristen provided me with her comments and revisions on that draft today, so I will be working on implementing the changes and resolving the questions we both identified early next week. You'll be getting some report-related requests from me at the start of next week as I work through that process. As I mentioned before, there is one additional quality control reviewer in addition to Kristen and I so we'll be working to get the report cleaned up for her and then will provide her with the draft as soon as we have it ready for her.

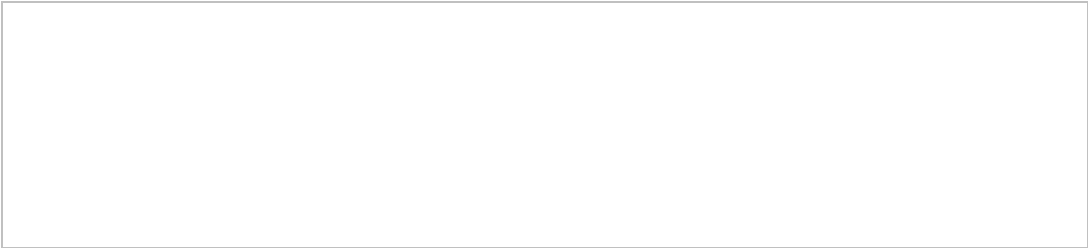

In our audit file itself, the team has continued to work through clearing comments and open items. Kristen and I have worked through some additional reviews, and then our quality control reviewer also completed her review of the single audit over federal funding. Like I mentioned last week, our quality control reviewer will wait until comments and open items are substantially addressed to work through the remainder of the file. Next week may be a bit quieter as Justine will be out of the office teaching a training, but we have pulled in some additional help to compensate.

Please see attached for our open items as of today.

Thank you and have a great weekend,

Good morning Aaron,

I'll get these open items taken care of today. With Les being gone, I'll do my best to answer the controls walkthrough questions, but a quick scan and it looks like I should be able to square these away today.
