Hi Alan -

I have in my notes to check in. Have you had a chance to look at information to complete the arbitrage rebate calculations?

Thanks,

Fred

This is a follow up from my voicemail on the above mentioned bonds.

First for the 2020 GO Bonds, I am checking to see if the proceeds have been spent. If so, we can move forward with the arbitrage rebate calculation. If the proceeds have not been spent, I can push the calculation back to 1/31/2025, the required five-year installment date. A calculation will need to be completed at that time, regardless if the proceeds have been spent or not. If a payment is owed to the IRS it must be paid by 4/1/2025 or it will be considered late. Not to alarm you, but we have completed several arbitrage rebate calculations for bonds issued from 2019 through early 2022, and there have been payments needing to be made to the IRS given the low Bond Yields during this time and the sharp increase in rates in 2023.

The 2015 Bonds were refunded by the 2023 Bonds. The Reserve Fund for the 2015 were used to redeem the 2015 Bonds on 6/30/2023. The attached spreadsheet for the 2015 Bonds shows interest earnings through June of 2021. I am assuming this was in some sort of cd. Was the cd renewed? There should be interest earnings on this Reserve Fund through 2023. If a cd was not purchased, was it commingled with other funds in a money market account? If so, we would need monthly rates from June 2021 - June 2023 to compute the earnings on the Reserve Fund proceeds.

Please give me call to discuss.

Unfortunately not yet, I have it on my to do list to get this to you once I'm done with the Audit docs. In theory, I just have one more allocation to deal with, so hopefully I can get to this next week.

I can, I just handed in a draft report to the auditors just in time to head out for our winter break (Every corner presented a new...challenge). Adam is also about to leave the country and I'll need him to confirm what the bonds were covering to make sure we have everything. I'm setting up a meeting with him first week back to go over the covered amounts and get that detail over to you on the expenditures and an update on that CD.

This is a follow up from my voicemail on the above mentioned bonds.

First for the 2020 GO Bonds, I am checking to see if the proceeds have been spent. If so, we can move forward with the arbitrage rebate calculation. If the proceeds have not been spent, I can push the calculation back to 1/31/2025, the required five-year installment date. A calculation will need to be completed at that time, regardless if the proceeds have been spent or not. If a payment is owed to the IRS it must be paid by 4/1/2025 or it will be considered late. Not to alarm you, but we have completed several arbitrage rebate calculations for bonds issued from 2019 through early 2022, and there have been payments needing to be made to the IRS given the low Bond Yields during this time and the sharp increase in rates in 2023.

The 2015 Bonds were refunded by the 2023 Bonds. The Reserve Fund for the 2015 were used to redeem the 2015 Bonds on 6/30/2023. The attached spreadsheet for the 2015 Bonds shows interest earnings through June of 2021. I am assuming this was in some sort of cd. Was the cd renewed? There should be interest earnings on this Reserve Fund through 2023. If a cd was not purchased, was it commingled with other funds in a money market account? If so, we would need monthly rates from June 2021 - June 2023 to compute the earnings on the Reserve Fund proceeds.

Please give me call to discuss.

I can, I just handed in a draft report to the auditors just in time to head out for our winter break (Every corner presented a new...challenge). Adam is also about to leave the country and I'll need him to confirm what the bonds were covering to make sure we have everything. I'm setting up a meeting with him first week back to go over the covered amounts and get that detail over to you on the expenditures and an update on that CD.

Unfortunately not yet, I have it on my to do list to get this to you once I'm done with the Audit docs. In theory, I just have one more allocation to deal with, so hopefully I can get to this next week.

This is a follow up from my voicemail on the above mentioned bonds.

First for the 2020 GO Bonds, I am checking to see if the proceeds have been spent. If so, we can move forward with the arbitrage rebate calculation. If the proceeds have not been spent, I can push the calculation back to 1/31/2025, the required five-year installment date. A calculation will need to be completed at that time, regardless if the proceeds have been spent or not. If a payment is owed to the IRS it must be paid by 4/1/2025 or it will be considered late. Not to alarm you, but we have completed several arbitrage rebate calculations for bonds issued from 2019 through early 2022, and there have been payments needing to be made to the IRS given the low Bond Yields during this time and the sharp increase in rates in 2023.

The 2015 Bonds were refunded by the 2023 Bonds. The Reserve Fund for the 2015 were used to redeem the 2015 Bonds on 6/30/2023. The attached spreadsheet for the 2015 Bonds shows interest earnings through June of 2021. I am assuming this was in some sort of cd. Was the cd renewed? There should be interest earnings on this Reserve Fund through 2023. If a cd was not purchased, was it commingled with other funds in a money market account? If so, we would need monthly rates from June 2021 - June 2023 to compute the earnings on the Reserve Fund proceeds.

Please give me call to discuss.

Fred,

Is this what detail you are looking for? This is run off the GL detail so it is an accrual basis, not cash, please let me know if that needs to be changed to cash.

I ran this for the same time period As the 2019 version of the report you had sent for fund 31, and got similar results. I'll take a look tomorrow though and see if I can't square away what the discrepancies were, and why [REDACTED]

First for the 2020 GO Bonds, I am checking to see if the proceeds have been spent. If so, we can move forward with the arbitrage rebate calculation. If the proceeds have not been spent, I can push the calculation back to 1/31/2025, the required five-year installment date. A calculation will need to be completed at that time, regardless if the proceeds have been spent or not. If a payment is owed to the IRS it must be paid by 4/1/2025 or it will be considered late. Not to alarm you, but we have completed several arbitrage rebate calculations for bonds issued from 2019 through early 2022, and there have been payments needing to be made to the IRS given the low Bond Yields during this time and the sharp increase in rates in 2023.

The 2015 Bonds were refunded by the 2023 Bonds. The Reserve Fund for the 2015 were used to redeem the 2015 Bonds on 6/30/2023. The attached spreadsheet for the 2015 Bonds shows interest earnings through June of 2021. I am assuming this was in some sort of cd. Was the cd renewed? There should be interest earnings on this Reserve Fund through 2023. If a cd was not purchased, was it commingled with other funds in a money market account? If so, we would need monthly rates from June 2021 - June 2023 to compute the earnings on the Reserve Fund proceeds.

Please give me call to discuss.

Where column F = 1510 would be interest earnings.

First for the 2020 GO Bonds, I am checking to see if the proceeds have been spent. If so, we can move forward with the arbitrage rebate calculation. If the proceeds have not been spent, I can push the calculation back to 1/31/2025, the required five-year installment date. A calculation will need to be completed at that time, regardless if the proceeds have been spent or not. If a payment is owed to the IRS it must be paid by 4/1/2025 or it will be considered late. Not to alarm you, but we have completed several arbitrage rebate calculations for bonds issued from 2019 through early 2022, and there have been payments needing to be made to the IRS given the low Bond Yields during this time and the sharp increase in rates in 2023.

The 2015 Bonds were refunded by the 2023 Bonds. The Reserve Fund for the 2015 were used to redeem the 2015 Bonds on 6/30/2023. The attached spreadsheet for the 2015 Bonds shows interest earnings through June of 2021. I am assuming this was in some sort of cd. Was the cd renewed? There should be interest earnings on this Reserve Fund through 2023. If a cd was not purchased, was it commingled with other funds in a money market account? If so, we would need monthly rates from June 2021 - June 2023 to compute the earnings on the Reserve Fund proceeds.

Please give me call to discuss.

Where column F = 1510 would be interest earnings.
