At this stage I would be interested in reaching out to them for a conversation. I have thus far been disappointed in the level of communication I've been getting from RSM. I've tried to reach out for a call a couple of times and been met with at best an email, and communication has been solely through either email with an associate, or docs being uploaded to the portal without notifying me. Especially dealing with this equipment work. Right now it's looking like I'm going to need to adjust F&F, [REDACTED]. It was a mistake on my part to not review F&F with more detail, I had assumed the Auditors had already reviewed that piece and it was okay, but it's turning into a headache now.

Another FYI, if Peggy does not already have a high speed desktop scanner, I'm going to need to buy her one, but I think she may have one somewhere. On that note, however, we may need to have a conversation about adding an AP clerk to my staff, I'll take a more detailed look after the audit, but on average, we should expect a clerk to be able to process about 500-1,000 invoices in a month, but there are months where we are pushing well past that. While we are typically issuing about 500 checks a month, it would appear that many of our vendors are issuing multiple invoices per month that need processing. We are at a point where we could probably get away with someone part-time, but that is going to be tough to fill. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]. For my totals, I ran the invoices that were processed between July 1 and June 30 of FY 24, and indexed them by vendor and invoice number to create a unique list of invoices that were processed (To account for split invoices). I'll take a closer look at this when I have some time, but for a 10 minute look, the theory of how I went about this feels somewhat sound.

I'm good with both meeting with this audit firm and the scanner purchase. We should talk more about best path forward on scanning.
