Good Afternoon Adam and Alan,

I just wanted to reach out with another update before the weekend. This week our focus was on two primary areas:

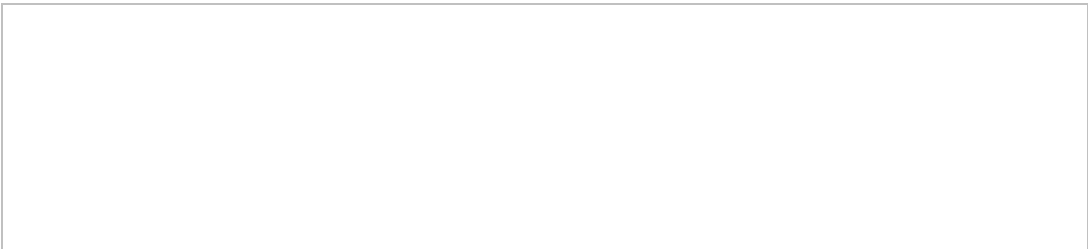

- I worked with Alan to get the report updated and our report-related questions resolved after Kristen’s and my reviews. I have mentioned a couple times that we have one final reviewer—a partner who serves as a quality control reviewer—and we have now sent the report draft to her so that she can perform her own reviews. It is likely that she’ll have some questions or proposed changes from her review, but otherwise once that review is completed and we have addressed her feedback, then we will be done with reviews over the report itself. I believe Alan has a good sense of what was updated/changed as part of our reviews, but we’ll go ahead and share an updated draft at that point as well so that you can fully review the updated version.
- Our team has continued to work through clearing comments and addressing open items related to our audit testing and documentation. I have included similar language in past updates and that is because this process does take time to get through, but I can provide some additional context. As I mentioned, last week was a bit slower since there were some conflicts on our schedule. However, the team has made great progress this week—one of the metrics I have access to shows that this week was nearly four times as productive as last! Our quality control reviewer will need to also perform some additional reviews of our audit documentation, but we believe that she will be able to begin that process next week since the number of review comments we have outstanding has been shrinking.

Since the District is closed next week—and with the holiday it is a short week for us as well—I’ll hold off on sending over an update next week. I have attached a list of open items from Suralink as of today, although it is likely that there will be some changes next week as well.

Thank you—enjoy your time off and the Fourth!
