Good Afternoon Adam and Alan,

We hope you both are well! As I mentioned last week, we wanted to send over a weekly update to keep you informed on the progress of the audit.

As I am sure you have seen, we have sent over a flurry of questions and requests this week. Those have come out of our review and wrap-up process—our team is hard at work to wrap these open items up, and we appreciate your assistance with this. I have attached a list of our open requests as of today, which has been pulled from Suralink.

Our audit goes through several rounds of review and at this time Kristen and myself are through our reviews of the majority of audit testing. Our remaining reviews will mostly focus on reviewing the team’s responses to our comments, as well as the audit completion documentation and deliverables. There is also an additional, final round of reviews that is performed—this is a quality control review performed by a second partner. This individual has begun the early stages of their review, but as a best practice will wait for the team to have addressed the open items before working through the rest of their reviews, so please note there will likely be some additional questions/requests that come out of that process.

Finally, while we have been ticking and tying our audit testing to the ACFR draft all along, this week we began dedicated reviews of the ACFR draft in earnest. Similar to our audit testwork, this will go through three rounds of review as well—at this time I am working through my reviews, with the plan to have the draft ready for Kristen by mid-next week for her to begin her own reviews. Please note that this means we are actively making changes to the draft, so we would ask that you hold off on making any changes yourselves temporarily—although if you identify needed changes we certainly want to hear about them. I am making a list of changes made and will be sure to walk through these with you so that you have a chance to review these as well.

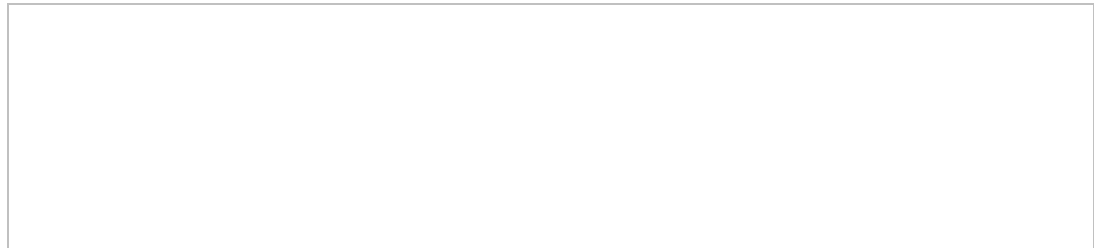

Please let us know if you have any questions or need anything from us in the meantime.

Thank you and have a good weekend,

Sounds good Aaron. Thank you for the update. Working on getting those updated few sample items taken care of. A few are proving to be a little bit of an annoyance.

For the understanding section, I've asked Adam to update those since he is about the only person who would have been here on 6/30/23. Hopefully he can get that done on Monday, and I can review if needed.
